DOROTHY GOEBEL OF TINLEY A JUNE BRIDE

A pretty June wedding of charming simplicity took place in the Zion Lutheran church in Tinley Park last Sunday afternoon at four o'clock, when two popular young people of Tinley Park and Orland Park, took their vows and their marriage has drawn two of the oldest and well known families of these two communities into a closer relation.

Miss Dorothy Goebel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Goebel of Tinley Park and Wm. Beagley, Jr., son of Wm. T. Beagley of Orland township, president of the Orland State Bank and former highway commissioner of Orland township, were the contracting parties.

At the appointed hour, the bride prettily attired in white chiffon, with a long tulle veil and carrying a beautiful bouquet of gardenias, entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march. At the altar, the bride was met by the groom and the pastor, Rev. Albert Buddenhagen who performed the single ring ceremony.

Attending the bride were two girlhood chums, one of whom, Mrs. Roy Cleveland, formerly Mildred Nielsen, herself a bride of two weeks ago, served as matron of honor and Miss Ruth Funk who is stewardess on the crack Rock Island California train, "The Californian" served as bridesmaid. Both were attired in white marquisette and accessories to match and carried mixed bouquets.

The pathway of the bride was strewn with flower petals by Beverly Powell niece of the groom.

The groom was attended by his chum, Franklin Loebe of Orland Park, Roy Cleveland of Tinley Park and Harry Schmidt of McAllen, Texas as a cousin of the bride were ushers. Clarence Beagley of Orland sang "O Promise Me".

White was the predominating color scheme. The church was prettily decorated with white peonies.

At the close of the ceremony the bridal couple drove to Joliet to have their pictures taken and upon their return to the home of the bride a wedding dinner was served to sixty-five guests.

The bride taught the Oak Forest public school for the past four years and the Oak Forest PTA presented her with a beautiful 60 piece Rock Crystal set at a recent shower. A week ago Mrs. Roy Cleveland held a kitchen shower in her new home in honor of the bride. The latter received many pretty and useful gifts.

The groom is employed as salesman by the Caterpillar Tractor Co., of Peoria.

Following a honeymoon in Wisconsin the young couple will go to housekeeping in Princeton, Ill. The well wishes of their host of friends for joy and happiness follow them into their new home.

Tinley 1 rims Evergreen 8 to 0

Behind the steady pitching of Homerding, Tinley Park again regained its winning stride last Sunday when Evergreen Park was swamped 8 to 0. Smartering after two defeats the Tinley lads lost little time in their victory march when they scored twice in the first. Thereafter it was tally each inning except the third when Steiglitz managed to stem the tide.

Homerding allowed only two scratch singles while striking out 8.

The Parkers took advantage of Steiglitz's wildness and worked him for eight free passes. Once on the bases the Tinley boys ran wild.

With a revised lineup Tinley once more shows the aggressiveness that was theirs in the early season encounters. A tight battle is predicted next Sunday when Tinley meets Homer A. C. at Tinley. Game time is 2:30. The date is June 27. The place—Schmidt's field.

Tinley Legion Post Carnival Success

The much talked of and heralded carnival sponsored by the Tinley Park Legion Post is now a matter of history. Just a few days before the opening day June 18, a rainy period set in, but by the opening night the weather had cleared and the evening was perfect. An extraordinary large crowd was present. The Tinley Park school band under the direction of Chas. Peters furnished an open air band concert which was much enjoyed and appreciated. The band is making fine headway as shown by the program they rendered.

The various rides and booths on the carnival grounds were very well patronized. Saturday night the attendance of Friday night was doubled, Sunday afternoon the affair was climaxed with a big parade in which drum and bugle corps from Chicago Heights, Blue Island and Harvey marched and played. The local Legion Post, Legion Auxiliary, and fleet of trucks of the Tinley Park bakery. The Tinley Park Dairy Vogt's Department store and other business firms also took part in the parade which was headed by Mayor F. A. Harper riding in a car. At the conclusion of the parade the carnival grounds were packed with people from all the nearby towns and cities. Several thousand people were in Tinley Sunday afternoon and evening. Toward evening a thundershower came up and the crowd dispersed but the storm passed around Tinley and later in the evening the crowd returned.

The undertaking was a decided success and the Tinley Legion Post is very appreciative and thankful to the public for their liberal support which made the three day festival a success. Tinley folks have again demonstrated that when they undertake anything they invariably make it a worth while success.

Blames Bridge For Accident

L. G. Bruder feels that the bridge located near his farm in New Lenox township is being neglected and that this was the cause of a recent accident. He has written the following letter to Geo. H. Baker, Engineer of County Roads, Division of Highways, Springfield, Ill:

"I want to call your attention to the bridge on the highway that runs west of Mokena, Will County, Ill., which bridge is located in New Lenox Township and is under the supervision of the supervisor and highway commissioner of that township.

This bridge has been neglected for years. There are no railings on this bridge and it is too narrow, due to the fact that there is a sharp curve in the highway as it passes over the bridge and the traffic moves along the northside of the bridge. This bridge should be widened and protected by a rail on each side.

My object in taking this matter up with you is due to the fact that a boy 12 years old was injured at this bridge Monday afternoon, May 31st and sustained a broken leg and will have to remain in the hospital the doctor informs me this morning, for at least six weeks, as his leg is so splintered they are having a hard time to set it.

If this highway and bridge had been given the proper attention by the supervisor and highway commissioner of New Lenox Township, an accident of this kind would not have happened and it seems to me the officials of New Lenox Township should be held responsible and, therefore, I am requesting you as a taxpayer and citizen of Will County that you have your Inspector make a thorough investigation and contact the officials of New Lenox Township (Continued on back page)

SYNOPSIS

Brooke Reyburn visits the office of Jed Stewart, a lawyer, to discuss the terms of an estate she has inherited from Mrs. Mary Amanda Dane. Unwittingly she overhears Jed talking to Mark Trent, a nephew of Mrs. Dane who has been disinherited. Mrs. Dane had lived at Lookout House, a huge structure on the sea, built by her father and divided into two, for her and Mark's father. Brooke had been a fashion expert, and Mrs. Dane, a "shut-in," hearing her on the radio, had invited her to call and develop a deep affection for her. Mark discloses that Mrs. Dane had threatened to disinherit him if he married Lola, from whom he is now divorced. He says he does not trust Henri and Clotilde Jacques, Mrs. Dane's servants. He says he is not interested in an offer of Brooke's to share the estate with him. Leaving her department store job, Brooke refuses an offer to "go stepping" with Jerry Field, a carefree young man who wants to marry her. At a family conference she learns she must live at Lookout House alone, since Lucette, her younger sister who is taking her job, her brother, Sam, a young playwright, and her mother plan to stay in the city.

CHAPTER III

Through the open transom above the office door came the hum of typewriters. Mark Trent, behind his desk, scowled in the direction of the sound. He had paid good money for those machines on the understanding that they were noiseless. Curious that he never had been annoyed by them before. Must be this confounded note in his hands. He read again:

Dear Mr. Trent—
Many times your aunt has told me of the Thanksgivings you spent with her at Lookout House. Won't you dine here on the coming holiday? My mother, sister and brother will be with me. There are many family treasures which you should have. I would like to go over them with you, and more than all, I want to thank you for pulling me out from under that car. I really wasn't so ungrateful as I sounded. This is a late invitation because I have been bolstering up my courage to ask you. Please come. Bury the hatchet, or accept the olive branch, or however peace between enemies—though I am not for a moment your enemy—is being accomplished now.

Sincerely yours,
Brooke Reyburn

Lookout House

He dropped the note and frowned at the red carnations in a crystal vase on his desk. He lived over the instant he had seen a girl go down in the street, had seen a speeding car almost upon her. How had he managed to save her? Colorless and dazed as she was, he had thought her the loveliest thing he ever had seen as she looked up at him. As for a second he had steadied her in his arms, his brain had fought against her attraction and the live warmth of her body had prompted him to growl at her. No wonder she had been angry, and no wonder—he admitted honestly—Mary Amanda Dane had been taken in by her. Well, one victim in the family was enough. She shouldn't hypnotize him.

He drew letter paper toward him and picked up a pen. He'd settle this question of friendship between them for good and all. Little schemer!

Dear Miss Reyburn, he wrote. As he hesitated as to how to word his regrets, another picture of the girl as she had appeared between the hangings in Stewart's office flashed in his mind with startling clarity.

He must get along with that note. His frowning regard of the opening door changed to a welcoming smile as a head poked in.

"Come in, Jed. What's on the little mind now?"

Jed Stewart perched on a corner of the flat desk. He pulled one of the red carnations from the vase and drew the stem through the buttonhole of the lapel of his checked coat.

"I'm taking a lady to tea, need a posey to make me look like a million, so combined utility with business and came here. Knew you always had them."

"What's the business? If you've been sent again to ask me to take half of that—"

"Hold everything; that's all washed up. The matter has not been mentioned to me since the day you and Brooke Reyburn met in my office. I guess you killed her interest in you by your infernal sarcasm."

"Hope you'll enjoy the house and fortune, Miss Reyburn. Happy landings! Perhaps I'd better say, safe landings, sez you."

"Oh, you think so? Read that." Jed Stewart frowned over the note Mark Trent tossed to him. He read it through, reread it. Looked at his friend.

"Going?"

"Going! What do you think?" Mark answered a buzzer. "Who? Mrs. Gregory. Of course I'll see her."

He explained hurriedly to Stewart. "It's an old friend of Aunt Mary Amanda's. She sailed for France a week before my aunt died. She's a martinet, one of those terrible women who don't care where the lash of their tongue falls, and a confirmed matchmaker."

"This is mighty good of you, Mrs. Gregory, and it's a clear case of thought transference; not ten minutes ago I was thinking of you." A wave of feeling menaced the clarity of Mark's voice as he bent over the white-gloved hand of the woman who had entered the office. She had been a vital part of the life at Lookout House which now seemed so irretrievably far behind him. A smile tugged at his lips as he observed that the floppy wide-brimmed picture hat was the model she had worn since as a boy he had admired the deeply waved blonde hair it shadowed. The hair was still faultlessly marcelled, but it was snow white.

She settled into a chair with the same rustle of taffeta he remembered, and adjusted a diamond brooch of a size and brilliance to make a discriminating thief avidly flex supple fingers. She peered up at him through a jeweled lorgnette, with eyes once a brilliant blue, now the color of faded larkspur.

"Handsome as ever, aren't you, Mark, in spite of the way those two women let you down. First that wife, with a grande amoureuse complex, and then Mary Amanda. I don't wonder that your hair at the temples looks as if it had been touched by frosty fingers, if you are only thirty. Who's he?"

She waved her lorgnette toward Stewart, who, back to the room, apparently had been absorbed in a study of the calf-bound books on the shelf.

"Stewart, of the firm of Stewart and Stewart, attorneys. Jed, come here. I want to present you to Mrs. Gregory, my first love."

"Hmp! Flatterer! You always could coax my heart out of my breast with your wonderful smile and your voice, Mark." She peered through her lorgnette as Jed Stewart took the hand she extended with the air of a sovereign.

"Handsome as Ever, Aren't You?"

"Stewart and Stewart! You were Mary Amanda Dane's lawyer, weren't you?"

The contempt in her voice deepened the color of Jed Stewart's already sufficiently ruddy face.

"I had that honor."

"Honor! Do you call it an honor to help cheat her nephew out of his inheritance?"

"Really, Mrs. Gregory, Jed can't be held responsible—"

"Hold your tongue, Mark. I've started, and now I intend to get rid of a few things that have been boiling and sizzling inside me since the day I heard that Mary Amanda had cut you out in favor of that fashion adviser she'd gone crazy about."

"Forget it, Mrs. Gregory. I don't need the money—"

"Of course you need it. No one has money enough now because no one has a sense of financial security. Didn't you take over all the lame ducks as your share of your grandfather's property so that your aunt wouldn't be worried by them? Aren't you making that ex-wife of yours an allowance? Mary Amanda told me. What's she been doing since she left you for that French count? It was a French count year, wasn't it? They were buzzing round rich girls thick as wasps about a broiled live lobster."

"She has married, I understand."

"Married! After she divorced the count! The third time! Getting to be a habit, isn't it? She isn't entitled to a penny. I don't wonder your aunt was furious when she found out that you were giving her money. Perhaps that's the real reason she cut you off, though I thought it was because she didn't believe in divorce; on that subject she was stuck back in the eighties. However, that wasn't what I came here to talk about. I just wanted to tell you that if I had known what was in that will I witnessed two days before I sailed for Europe—it was just a week before she died—now, Stewart, don't look at me with your jaw dropped as if I were a moron with a Medusa complex—of course, I know that a person isn't supposed to know the contents of the will she witnesses, but I still say that had I known that your aunt was leaving her money away from you, Mark, I would have cut off my hand before I signed."

Mark Trent's heart stopped and galloped furiously on. A will witnessed a week before Mary Amanda's death! The will which had been probated was of a date two months prior. As he opened suddenly stiffened lips to reply, he met Jed Stewart's warning eyes, eyes which seemed like flames in a chalky face. Jed was as amazed as he.

Jed began to speak. "I was fond of my client Mrs. Dane, and your reference to her last will brought back a picture of the delicate woman in her wheel chair with—"

"With that disreputable parrot swearing in the cage behind her. The bird was there when I witnessed the will; I didn't know but that she would insist upon Micawber's being the other witness, but she called in Clotilde and Henri Jacques, it was her nurse-companion's day off. If I had to choose between the parrot and that French butler as my co-resident on a desert island, I'd take Mr. Micawber. After they went out, Mary Amanda and I were alone for a few moments in the firelight. It was the last time I saw her—"

Mrs. Gregory dabbed her reddening eyes with a lace-edged handkerchief. She straightened, demanded angrily:

"Why am I slobbering like that? I love life! I wouldn't give up my place in this problem-logged world for all the stary halos and golden harps you could offer. Thinking of your aunt set me off. The last few times I saw her I had noticed that she seemed distraught, as if something were worrying her. I've wondered since if she would have told me what she had done if I had not had to hurry away. I called Henri before I left. As I looked back, she seemed white and exhausted. As I drove away I saw that girl driving in."

"That girl! You mean—"

"The Reyburn girl, of course, Stewart. You ought to get a position somewhere as an echo. I'd met her several times and I liked her too before I knew what she had done to Mark. She made me forget that I was old enough to be her grandmother. Charming manners. Well, I must run along."

"Thank you for your interest in me, Mrs. Gregory. I'm going down to your car with you. Wait for me, Jed."

The woman turned on the threshold. "I hope, if ever you draw another will cutting out a rightful heir, young man, you'll be swished in boiling oil."

Stewart grinned. "Not boiling oil, madam, not boiling; couldn't you reduce the temperature a degree?"

She smiled. "We'll see, we'll see. You're an engaging boy, if you are a poor lawyer. I'm to spend the winter in my country house—not far from the Dane-Trent property—everybody's doing it this year. Motor down some Sunday for lunch."

"Sure, I'll come. Meanwhile, would you mind not telling anyone that you witnessed Mrs. Dane's will?"

"You don't think I'm proud of my part in that robbery, do you? I wouldn't have mentioned it now, but I wanted to square myself with Mark."

Mark Trent's mind was in a tumult as he chatted with her in the corridor, inquired for her health on the way down in the elevator, told her that he thought of her rich fruit cake whenever he attended a wedding. She looked up at him sharply as they waited at the curb.

"Then you still attend weddings?"

"Why not? I rather like them."

"After your experience, I should think you would shun them. Ever see Lola?"

"No."

"Here's my car. That's Dominique at the wheel. Remember him, don't you? He drove my horses before I had an automobile, and the only thing I have against him is that he recommended his friends the Jacques to your aunt. She made so much of Henri that he got dictator-minded and tried to run the whole place."

Jed Stewart was walking the floor when he entered his office. He stopped abruptly.

"Well," he demanded, "did she talk any more?"

"Not about the will. Why the dickens didn't you ask questions?"

"Didn't dare. Don't you see, Mark? Boy, don't you understand? Someone has snitched that second will she witnessed."

"Did you draw it?"

"Never heard of it. Perhaps your aunt had an acute attack of remorse. I argued with her, as much as a lawyer can argue, against cutting you out; she wouldn't come to me about a new will. Didn't Mrs. Gregory say that she had been distraught the last few times they had been together? She thinks it was because Mrs. Dane was making up her mind to disinherit you; you and I know that the will to that effect already had been drawn."

"You passed up a grand chance to cross-examine her, Jed."

"Didn't dare. She thinks the will she witnessed is the one probated; doesn't know that if it had been she would have been summoned to prove her signature. We mustn't let a suspicion of this second will get out. Where is it?"

"She said the Reyburn girl drove in as she left the place. Do you suppose Aunt Mary Amanda told her what was in it and that she—"

Jed Stewart stopped his restless pacing. His eyes and voice were troubled.

Lesson for June 27

LESSON TEXT—Hebrews 11:3-10, 17-22.
GOLDEN TEXT—These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth.—Hebrews 11:13.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Honor Roll.
JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Honor Roll.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Heroes of Faith.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Faith Tested and Triumphant.

The great "heroes of the faith" chapter, Hebrews 11, provides an excellent review summary of the messages in Genesis, which we have studied during the last three months. Fittingly, the entire account, from the Creation to the hope for the future expressed by Joseph, revolves around the word "Faith." The patriarchs had many noble qualities but these were all rooted in the fundamental of all virtues, namely, that faith in God without which "it is impossible to please him" (v. 6).

Our study may well attempt no closer analysis of the text than to note the results of faith as they appear in the verses of our lesson.

I. Understanding (v. 3).

Philosophy and human research frequently bog down in the confused bypaths of unbelief and partial knowledge, but faith cuts right through the clouds and the confusion and "understands" that God is the creator of all things. If you want to know, believe God.

II. Worship (v. 4).

The world abounds with cults and religions of almost unbelievable diversity, and of appalling insufficiency for the needs of man. Only when man does as did Abel, and worships God in accordance with God's holy law will he obtain "witness that he" is "righteous."

III. Fellowship (v. 5).

Here again faith triumphs. The societies and associations of man fumble around trying to establish "good will," "fellowship of faiths," and what not, only to fail. But when a man knows God as Enoch did, then he is ready for true fellowship with his brother.

IV. Assurance (v. 6).

When a man trusts God implicitly the uncertainties of life vanish. It is an easier thing to talk about than to do, but, thank God, it can be done. We must believe not only that God is, but by faith we must recognize him "as the rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

V. Salvation (v. 7).

Saved by faith—that is the story of the Christian, even as it was the story of Noah. The ark is typical of Christ. Only in him is there salvation.

VI. Obedience (vv. 8, 9).

The world has a ribald saying, "I don't know where I'm going but I'm on my way," which represents a dangerous philosophy of life. But faith in God enables one to go with Abraham who "when he was called went out, not knowing whither he went." He knew God and that was enough to call forth unquestioning obedience.

VII. Vision (v. 10).

Men of vision—that's what we need, we are told. Well, then we need men of faith who can see the unseen, who can see "a city which hath foundations" even in the midst of the wilderness.

In the fields both of secular and spiritual achievement vision has marched before victory. Carey, Judson, Livingstone, every great missionary, dreamed dreams and saw visions before they achieved lasting victories in distant lands.

VIII. Resurrection (vv. 17-19).

God gave a promise and the only means of fulfilling that promise was about to be taken away, but Abraham did not hesitate for he believed that God was able and ready to raise the dead if necessary to fulfill his promise. Have all our prospects been dashed to the ground? Is everything hopeless, humanly speaking? God is both willing and able to make all things work together for good and for his glory.

IX. Hope (vv. 20-22).

The forward look—that is the look of faith. Isaac's blessing concerned "things to come." Jacob, too weak to stand alone, leaned on his staff and worshipped, and passed on the covenant blessing. Joseph gave commandment concerning his body, looking forward to God's fulfillment of the promise.

Christian hope is not a wishful desire that an unbelievable thing may somehow occur. That is an unbelieving misuse of the word "hope." To a child of God hope means a well-grounded assurance that God will keep his word.

Right and Wrong

Conscience is that faculty which perceives right and wrong in actions, approves or disapproves them, anticipates their consequences under the moral administration of God, and is thus either the cause of peace or of disquietude of mind.

Opportunities

There are people who would do great acts, but because they wait for great opportunities, life passes, and the acts of love are not done at all.—F. W. Robertson.

Modern-to-the-Minute

AS RIGHT as rain, and as cooling, are these clever young modes for the woman who sews. Each is simple to make, pleasant to wear, and may possibly be the difference between a modern and a mediocre wardrobe for you this summer. Sew-Your-Own wants to help you look your best, to stamp you modern-to-the-minute, and therefore is anxious and proud to present today's trio.

A Two Piecer for Chic.

If he tells you you're just a nice armful you are the right size and type to wear the blouse 'n' skirt shown above, left. The waistcoat idea is very much the thing in blouses. The skirt is terribly young and figure flattering. What more could any little heart desire?

Not Smart Matron.

You should sue for slander anyone who calls you a Smart Matron when you don this gratifying new fashion (above center). You step into an entirely new size range when you step forth in this frock. So simple is its technique—merely a deftly designed feminine jabot, softly draped contours, and a meticulously slender skirt—yet so effective. It will thrill you in marquisette chiffon or lace, and it will keep you deliciously cool.

Snappy for Sports.

Play the net or the grandstand in the sports dress at the right and feel perfectly confident in any event. There isn't one among us who hasn't a real yen for a streamlined all-of-a-piece sports-ter that's on and off in a jiffy, launders easily, and comes up smiling time after time. You can concoct something clever of seersucker or pique and complete the whole thing in an afternoon. Why not order your size today and have all-summer benefit of a really companionable sports dress?

The Patterns.

Pattern 1302 is for sizes 14 to 42. Size 16 requires 2½ yards of 39 inch material for the blouse, 2¼ yards for the skirt.

Pattern 1286 is for sizes 36 to 48. Size 38 requires 4½ yards of 39 inch material.

Pattern 1915 is for sizes 14 to 42. Size 16 requires 3½ yards of 35 inch material plus 3½ yards of bias binding to finish edges as pictured.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

Valuable Stones

The diamond is not the most valuable of precious stones. On an equal quality and carat basis, the diamond is worth no more than the sapphire, only forty to fifty per cent as much as the pigeon-blood ruby and only twenty-five to thirty per cent as much as the emerald.—Collier's Weekly.

Donovan and his wife went for a picnic. They found a pretty spot in a wood; and Donovan, putting down the basket, said he'd be away to get some sticks for the fire.
"Ah!" said his wife, "don't be bothering. We'll not need them. Haven't I brought the gas-ring?"

TWO HANDS

By GLUYAS WILLIAMS

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Barbecued Ham.—Fry the required number of thin ham slices from a left-over boiled ham. Arrange them in a serving dish, and pour the following sauce over them; add to the ham fat in the frying pan a teaspoonful of made mustard, half a teaspoonful sugar, three tablespoonfuls vinegar and a tablespoonful of red currant jelly. Warm all the ingredients up together, sprinkle with paprika (optional) and pour over the ham.

Clearing the Atmosphere.—Burn a few drops of vinegar on a hot shovel for a quick way of clearing the smell of stale smoke out of a room.

Washing Linoleum.—Oilcloth and linoleum will dry with a brighter finish if a lump of sugar is dissolved in the scrubbing water.

Chilling Canned Fruits.—Before placing canned fruits in the refrigerator to chill remove the paper label which acts as an insulator.

Cleaning Silver.—Moist salt will remove egg tarnish from silver.

Rice, Scrambled Eggs, Cheese.—Have ready a border of rice (boiled) in a dish. Make some scrambled eggs to which cheese has been added. Place the mixture in the center of the dish and sprinkle a little chopped parsley over the top. Serve piping hot.

Washing Woolens.—Rinse woolens in warm water to which a little olive oil has been added. This helps to keep them soft.

Removing Spots From Tile.—Spots can be removed from the tile bathroom floor by rubbing with a cloth moistened with kerosene and then polishing with one moistened with paraffin.

Frying Doughnuts.—To keep doughnuts from absorbing too much of the fat in which they are fried put a drop or two of vinegar in the dough when mixing the ingredients.

Quick Mayonnaise.—The yellow part of an egg is thoroughly beaten up with a teaspoon vinegar. Add some salt and pepper. Pour oil over it and whip the mixture thoroughly. Then add two dessertspoons of vinegar and one tablespoon boiling water.

with Anna Mesenbrink our vice oracle having charge. The oracle, Anna Hopman is visiting her father in California.

After bills were paid, it was found we had done fairly well with our booth and fortune teller at the recent carnival. The giving of the booth, will be held at some public affair in the near future.

The committee wishes to thank all who helped in any way of our booths.
There is to be a Royal Neighbor having cars please take some of these "picnicers" with you from the meeting place.

A jolly time was had after the stunting. We even saw some of our members taking sitting-up exercises.

As the saying goes, "When the cat's

IN MEMORIAM
KNIPPEL—In fond and loving memory of our dear son and brother, Raymond J. Knippel, who left us so suddenly ten years ago June 29, 1927.
"The thrush that seeks a brighter land,
Sings just as sweetly there,
The rose that blooms beyond the wall
Sheds fragrance just as rare.
When sunset comes and we are left
With memory for the only light,
We know, beyond the silver seas,
There is a morning dear and bright;
Then let us keep our memories true,
With hearts that trust and understand.
The light we loved has never dimmed,
But reached at last, a fairer land.
Lonely the house, and sad the hours
Since our dear one has gone;
But Oh! a brighter home than ours,
In Heaven is now his own.
Signed: MOTHER, DAD, BROTHER AND SISTER.

REP. LOTTIE HOLMAN O'NEILL GIVES INTERESTING ACCOUNT OF CLOSING DAYS OF LEGISLATURE

On June 30th, 1937, the sixtieth session of the Illinois General Assembly will cease to exist. The letters which I have formerly sent out to our local papers have been omitted because nothing has seemed to be settled. However, although the most important matters are still hanging in the balance some few things have been decided and at the request of persons who like to see these letters in their local paper I submit herewith a few notes.

The Drivers License bill has now reached what many believe to be its death scene. It has been before both branches of the legislature and the fight as to control of the jobs in administering it seems to have overshadowed every other consideration in the mind of the Democratic leaders. The Governor desires his friend of the Highway department to have it and the Chicago Democrats want the Secretary of State to have it. To those of us who do not care about that feature but simply want a safety measure is allotted the task of the fly and hoping after the affair is over the people will have secured some kind of a safety bill. At present the matter is over in a conference, probably with the two sides packed by the warriors. It looks bad for safety this time.

The schools may get a little in the way of fulfillment of legislative desires but not much according to the signs. The state distributive fund increase has been cut down but still is better than nothing if we can get that. The appropriation bill for high schools has been vetoed by the Governor but another substituted more to his liking. It may pass and will help a little. My bill 661 seeks to help the schools to help themselves by giving them power to take funds from the education fund up to 25 per cent for purpose of repairing buildings. The school boards in many instances have had to do this when nothing remained in the building fund and in as much as it is necessary it should be made legal. This bill passed the House and is now in the Senate.

The State School Board bill, Senate No. 1 came in with the aim of setting up a board of nine to take over control of local schools. It included the power to force consolidation and really was quite a dictatorship over education. It also would force the local districts to comply with the board's "rules and regulations" before receiving funds from the state distributive fund. The bill has now been amended to give the board advisory powers. Personally I believe if the board is established and power given to it gradually as the people become confident it is a better way. I am not intending to vote for it otherwise.

House Bill 816, compulsory medical treatment for social disease. This bill carries quite a large appropriation and is still in committee with little chance to get out I am told. This information is especially for those who have written me about this and whose letters have not been answered because of lack of time.

House Bill 599, seeks to put municipality owned utilities under the Commerce Commission. This has been defeated. This is good news for some sections of this county and is of interest to me because I believe in local control of government.

House Bill 57, Women's Eight Hour Bill, passed after a generation of work. Limits the hours during which any woman may work in this state in any twenty-four hours to eight, with certain exceptions.

House Bill 651, introduced by myself, seeks to give power to the county board to license automobile junk yards. I hope it gives them power to regulate as we in this county are particularly embarrassed by having several disfiguring the highway. This power should have been in the local people long ago. The bill has passed the House and is now in the Senate.

The question of relief administration is before the session again. Also we find here again the effort to take local control away and place it in the hands of a central agency in Springfield. This has been stopped and a compromise effected which I think will pass providing for relief to stay where it is in local hands with the continuance of the relief commission another two years, with allocating power only. They would have passed out of existence in July otherwise. If the commission is curtailed in power and permitted to allocate to the various counties the state relief funds, I think it is all right, or at least the lesser evil. Some allocating power has to be set up for this handling of state funds. It is my belief that we once establish a state relief setup in Springfield we will never get rid of it, whereas if it is locally controlled it can be gradually tapered out.

The session is remarkable for the number of bills presented by the administration mostly to regulate and tax the privilege of making a living. From the bill which provides that the watch repairer's apprentice shall get a five dollar license and be examined four times a year at five dollars each time, to the bill doubling the license for grading cream, the race goes merrily on. Of course sometimes a good moral character is demanded but for the most part the emphasis is on the five dollars.

The Tax Commission is also to secure its share of local business. House Bill 519 seeks to give the commission power to demand to audit the books of all municipalities, with field auditors generously scattered around, to be paid by the municipality chosen as the victim. I am opposing all this kind of business.

The Commerce Commission also seeks to add to its power that of controlling the truck business. The bill is aiming to practically run the whole business, setting daily hours of men to work, etc. I still think our people can get along without this expert advice and am opposing the bill.

You will notice with surprise perhaps the evident effort on the part of administrative leaders to take over and run the government through appointive persons as in Washington. The trend seems to be away from government by laws and toward control of affairs by men. I think many of these efforts will be defeated in Springfield but is interesting to note the evident desires of those in power to get more at great sacrifice to our local institutions.

Letters and messages have come to me about the matters mentioned and many others to which I cannot refer in this limited space. I have already agreed to meet with groups of our voters and others who may want detailed information as to what was done and why in Springfield this session. I shall be glad to tell you if I can.

In closing, I desire to express regret that the Democrats from the 41st district attempted to bring one of their factional disturbances onto the floor of the House thereby jeopardizing the hundreds of bills on the calendar. I refer to the controversy between the Democratic member from DuPage and the Democratic Judge Wilson of Will County. I found that many people in Will County were embarrassed that their affairs should be brought out in an effort to settle an unimportant political squabble at the cost of defeat to many legislative desires of interest to the state at large. I was glad to help the speaker and other house leaders to clear the atmosphere by voting to retire these gladiators to their local communities where they may continue their bouts unhampered by the interruption of state business. The people are faced with the defeat of the Drivers' License Bill through this kind of thing and we do not care to chance the loss of further legislation in that way. Incidentally, there are four hundred bills on the calendar with every legislative hour between now and the end of the month taken for roll calls. It is only fair that members should have a roll call on matters of interest to their district.

Silver Cross Hospital Nursing School To Accept Large Class

The Silver Cross Hospital School of Nursing is rapidly completing plans for the admission of a large class of students this fall. During the 'depression' years when many graduate nurses were unable to find work, this school, as well as many others, received small classes, thus providing more employment for the nurses who had already graduated. As economic conditions have improved, more and more nurses have secured positions, until, at the present time, many hospitals are finding it almost impossible to fill their staff positions satisfactorily. With greater assurance of employment after graduation, the number of students in the school is being increased.

In choosing a career, the young woman who is a High School graduate would do well to consider the advantages offered her by the nursing profession. Nursing today is a dignified, respected vocation, providing financial security and congenial employment in any one of the many varied branches of nursing service, and offering innumerable opportunities for advancement to positions of trust and responsibility. Nurses have the satisfaction of belonging to one of the few vocations that are indispensable to the welfare of human society. Whether she is in the home caring for one patient, or in the hospital where she ministers to many, or in the broader field of community service, the graduate nurse has a secure place in modern medical practice. The salaries received by graduate nurses compare favorably with those received by other professional groups, most of whom must expend considerably more time and money in securing their education. The student nurse, as she is acquiring skill and experience, performs many services for the hospital, thus paying for her education and maintenance. The cost of the nursing course, therefore, is limited to the necessary expenses for books, uniforms and incidentals, and is very low compared to the expense of other forms of vocational preparation.

The nursing course is also unexcelled as a practical preparation for life. This is shown by the increasing numbers of nurses who are being employed in positions that do not require them to give nursing care, but that do demand qualities developed by the nursing course. The great air-transport companies, for example, employ graduate nurses as stewardesses, not because their nursing skill is necessary, but because during their nursing course these young women have developed character, poise, dependability, self control, a knowledge of human nature, and the ability to meet emergencies calmly and efficiently.

The Silver Cross School of Nursing has been in continuous operation since 1895. Its graduates have filled many positions of responsibility, not only in this community, but also in other cities and states. The school is fully accredited by the State of Illinois and all its graduates are eligible to take the state examinations for registered nurses. The nursing course offered at Silver Cross Hospital is three years in length, effectively combining theoretical instruction with nursing practice. The school is associated with Joliet Junior College, and the sciences are taught by instructors of the Junior College. An affiliation with Milwaukee Children's Hospital insures a thorough knowledge of the diseases of children. With these advantages supplementing the fundamental experience in the hospital, the student receives a well-round course equal to that offered by the other schools in the state.

Student nurses reside in the Mary E. Lambert Nurses' Home, a building especially constructed to provide a pleasant and comfortable home for the young women in the school. The students' rooms are well furnished with good lighting and ventilation. A spacious lounge is available for the entertainment of guests, and a completely equipped kitchen and dining room are provided for serving refreshments. The new library containing fiction, periodicals, and up-to-date reference books is also located in the Nurses' Home. A competent Matron is in charge of the residence at all times. The building is adjacent to the hospital and overlooks the attractive grounds surrounding the hospital. Beautiful Highland and Pilcher Park are nearby, making the tennis courts and other amusement facilities of these parks available to the nurses. Good bus service provides easy access to the downtown shopping district.

For those interested in securing additional information about the school, a new bulletin has recently been issued, describing the course in detail. A copy will gladly be sent to anyone requesting it.

Facing America's Basic Problem

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Congress at this time is proposing a thorough study of the pressing problem of unemployment.

Every thoughtful American will approve such a plan. For as all citizens realize, widespread re-employment—with its consequent increases in production and in income for workers—constitutes the true key to recovery.

Yet like all ills, the current one of joblessness is difficult to solve without proper diagnosis. And that, according to many students of government, has been lacking. Earlier proposals for an accurate census of the jobless appear to have been ignored, while relief costs show no sign of shrinking.

In the place of some such accurate census, various estimates of the extent and nature of unemployment have been published. But these have varied widely—adding to the confusion. There is no question that a true knowledge of just who are out of jobs—and why—would help greatly in approaching a solution to this basic problem of the day.

Whether or not the proposed Congressional study contemplates such a count at this time has not been stated. But a sense of justice would seem to demand it—justice not only to the unfortunate job-hunters themselves, but to the millions of workers who bear the cost of aiding the unemployed, and who have a right to know just how their money is spent.

Every taxpayer is eager to help the jobless—but he wants to know that his money accomplishes that purpose without political ineptitude or waste.

And only through a sincere attempt to learn the facts can he get that assurance.

Fifty Billion Dollars—Of Your Money

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

From many observers of the Washington scene have come recent protests that the present Congress seems to ignore various urgently needed measures.

Constructive plans for re-employment, re-organization to reduce the cost and the number of political office-holders, effective steps toward a balanced budget, and numerous other projects, they point out, have made little progress during the present session.

But in one phase of their work, all agree, members of Congress have been far from inactive. That is the introduction of bills providing for spending huge volumes of public funds.

During the few months that the present Congress has been in session, members of the House of Representatives alone have tossed gaily into the legislative hopper more than 7,000 appropriation bills.

"Making allowance for overlapping bills," announced one member of the Appropriations Committee, "more than $50,000,000,000 would be required to cover all the proposed expenditures."

Fifty Billion Dollars—of other people's money.

Of course, neither the Appropriations Committee nor any one else expects all those 7,000 bills to pass. But the casual way in which they are offered, the astronomical totals they achieve, continue to demonstrate the attitude of office-holders toward public funds.

If they—and the public—would remember that all appropriations must come from taxes; if they—and the public—would remember that all taxes fall ultimately on the workers and earners, appropriation bills would be fewer in number—and more modest in their totals.

It is the duty of office-holders, as representatives of the people, to remember these things. And it is no less the duty of citizens to remind their representatives of the facts.

When both groups realize this truth, $50,000,000,000 may mean as much to office-holders as it does to the men and women who would be called upon to produce it in the sweat of their labor—and may be as carefully considered.

Wait Long for Cremation

It is not unusual for a Dutch family to sell all its property to defray the cost of cremation of the father, to meet the heavy cost in their country. A poor family will scrimp and save for years to provide funds for the ceremonial cremation of a member. Meanwhile, a corpse often reposes in a village graveyard for years waiting the accumulation of the necessary funds. Expense of cremation is sometimes reduced to a minimum by co-operative or mass cremations, at which 50 or 100 bodies are burned in one grand ceremony, and the expense divided pro rata.

THE HERALD OF MISTRESS SPRING

PETER RABBIT was sitting in the middle of the dear Old Brier Patch. Jolly, round, red Mr. Sun had just begun his daily climb up in the blue, blue sky, and Peter was wondering where he would go and what he would do when he heard a sound that caused him to suddenly sit up very straight with both ears pointing right up to the sky. Peter held his breath for a minute and then he heard it again. This time he jumped straight up in the air and kicked his heels together for joy. It was just the softest, sweetest whis-he had to stop to get his breath. "There, that's how glad I am!" he cried. "Now tell me all the news, Winsome."

"Oh, I couldn't, Peter. I couldn't tell you all. There's too much to tell and I haven't got time now. You know there are others waiting for me."

"But do tell me if Mistress Spring is most here," begged Peter.

"Of course she is! Don't you know I am her herald? I've come all the way up from down south just ahead of her to tell everybody that she is coming. You know, that is what a herald is for. I had rather be the herald of Mistress Spring than anything else in all the world." Winsome half lifted his beautiful blue wings as he said this.

"Don't go!" cried Peter. "I guess I know how you feel. It must be perfectly splendid to make everybody glad and happy as you do. I—I wish I could be a herald."

Winsome Bluebird laughed—the sweetest laugh. "I guess you don't need to be a herald to make people glad to see you, Peter," he said. "Besides, you know you can be sort of a herald by telling everybody you meet that I am here."

"That's so!" Peter cried. "That's one reason I like to be the first to see or hear you. It's great fun to see how pleased everybody is when they know that you have arrived. I—I hope nothing will happen to make Mistress Spring late."

PAINT AND VARNISH REMOVERS

PAINT and varnish removers do not actually remove a finish; their action is to soften the oils of a finish sufficiently to permit it to be wiped and scraped off. Liquid removers are a combination of solvents, such as wood alcohol, benzene, amyl acetate, and other liquids, usually combined with paraffin to check evaporation. Liquid removers act quickly; usually in not more than 20 minutes. By that time paint and varnish will be so softened that they can be wiped off with a rough cloth. For old paint, a second application may be necessary, and scraping with a putty knife. With liquid removers, there is no raising of the grain of wood.

The vapors of liquid varnish removers are inflammable, and care must be taken to avoid fire. I know of one case, and it was not unusual, when this was overlooked with disastrous results. Liquid varnish remover was being used to take the finish from a table. The work was being done in a small room, and as it was winter, the windows were closed. In the middle of things the worker lighted a cigarette; there was an instant flash of fire, and the house was saved from destruction only by quick work with an extinguisher.

When using a liquid remover, there should be good ventilation to carry off the vapors, and there should be no flames nearby. To avoid trouble, a liquid varnish remover should not be used in a cellar when the heater fire is burning, nor in a kitchen with a lighted coal range; with a gas range the pilot light should be put out. With ordinary and common sense precautions, liquid varnish removers can be used with complete safety.

The use of a liquid paint and varnish remover should be followed by liberal washing with turpentine to take up the paraffin.

Certain alkalis have the effect of paint removers; for example, wash-

GRIPPING THE CLUB

THERE are three ways of gripping the golf club: the overlapping, interlocking and the natural, two handed grip. In the overlapping grip the little finger of the right hand overlaps the forefinger of the left. With the interlocking grip the little finger of the right hand is interlocked with the forefinger of the left. A large number of the good golfers today employ one or the other of these grips and their value lies largely in creating better coordination of movement between the two hands.

The problem is to make the hands work as closely together as possible, to eliminate any tendency toward friction between the two. Good golf is a matter of smooth stroking and there is trouble enough along the swing's path without handicapping the stroke at the start. There are craftsmen in every field who grip the tools differently and golf is no exception. Two of the greatest golfers of this era, Bobby Jones and Gene Sarazen, used different grips, the former overlapping and the latter, interlocking. Most of the good golfers of the present day possess large hands and this makes the problem of which of these two grips to use comparatively simple for both are suitable for big hands and long fingers. Among the rank and file of players, however, there are many with small hands and stubby fingers. Women in particular have a natural handicap in

JUST GO FISHIN'

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHEN the world is lookin' bluer
Then you ever saw her, knew her,

When you only stumble through her
Day by day.

When you think you're weary of her,
Banker, worker, lawyer, lover,
There's a way you can recover
Right away.

When discouraged and disgusted,
When you're practically busted,
There's a way to git adjusted
And to smile:

From your cares and competition
Take a little intermission,
Jump the joint, and just go fishin'
For awhile.

Why, ya great big mastadon ya,
When your girl has gone back on ya.
As she ought to do, doggone ya,
You're so mean.

When you're troubled in the gizzard,
When you're sick from A to Izzard,
When you look just like a lizard,
Blue and green,

Then to cure each ache and shiver,
And to regulate your liver,
Row a boat, or wade a river
For a mile—

Yes, to feel the old ambition
And to git back in condition,
Jump the joint, and just go fishin'
For awhile!

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis
© Public Ledger, Inc.

TO THE expert palmist, the third finger is one of the most informative of the major elements of the hand. The first finger, you know, is a general index of power and purpose. The second finger likewise reveals the kind of conscious and subconscious thought through which the inner self finds expression. The third finger, which we are now to consider, denotes with equal accuracy the outlets through which ambition and thought can most successfully combine for manifestation.

Attributes of the Third Finger. You may look to the third or Finger of Brilliance, as it is called, for evidence of the creative faculties or lack of them. Remember that the word "creative" is not used solely in the artistic sense.

This finger may be broadly classified into six types. The first of these is the Normal Finger of Brilliance, which is moderate in length, straight and rather smoothly knuckled, and evenly spaced between the second and fourth fingers when the hand is opened wide. This is the third finger of the average everyday man or woman who possesses a normal amount of the creative faculty.

ing soda, trisodium phosphate, and lye. Of these, lye has the great disadvantage of being injurious to wood fibers, and should be used only when this effect is of no importance. Washing soda and trisodium phosphate dissolved in water in the proportion of 1 to 3 pounds to the gallon are usually satisfactory. They may have the effect of raising the grain of wood, which calls for sandpapering after the wood has dried.

DOAN'S PILLS

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—As it becomes more painfully apparent that there is no basis upon which to expect present returns of federal taxation to produce sufficient funds to maintain the administration's rate of spending, the President and the Treasury are peeping into every corner for new sources of money. They have already recommended to congress that the present nuisance taxes be re-enacted to bring in some five hundred million a year and they are casting their eyes elsewhere for other tax receipts.

In addition, and as a part of the general pinch that the Treasury now feels, Mr. Roosevelt has asked congress to revise certain provisions of income tax law to close up loopholes and prevent escape from taxation. The President's message to congress on this point was quite bitter and, many observers thought, rather unfair but, nevertheless, he told congress that it was up to the legislative branch to see that there was no tax avoidance.

The President's message dealt with an alleged moral phase of tax avoidance and that part of his message has provoked much criticism of the Chief Executive's attitude. He sought in his statement to the congress to make it appear that many wealthy persons had avoided taxes and that, by so doing, they had sinned.

Now, the President's view is entitled to consideration and his charge that there is tax avoidance is correct. Indeed, I believe no one can successfully dispute the charge that there is tax avoidance of a wholesale character in the United States. But when the matter is placed in the category of a moral issue, it must be examined in a different light. The President did not talk about tax evasion in his message; he talked about tax avoidance. Tax evasion is illegal and immoral. Tax avoidance is purely and simply the arrangement by an individual so that he pays the lowest tax he can and still complies with the law.

I am inclined to side with those in congress who have criticized the President on the attitude he assumed. As long as congress tells an individual, through the language of a law, that he must pay so much tax and prescribes the conditions, if that individual complies with that direction of congress, he does not commit a crime when he pays only that much tax.

I am constrained to support my view in this instance with the language of the late Mr. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes who, as a member of the Supreme court of the United States, gained probably as much respect as any man who ever sat on the highest bench. Mr. Justice Holmes said in a decision of the court 21 years ago and now strangely apropos the following words:

"We do not speak of evasion, because, when the law draws a line, a case is on one side of it or on the other, and if on the safe side it is none the worse legally that a person has availed himself to the full of what the law permits. When an act is condemned as an evasion, what is meant is that it is on the wrong side of the line indicated by the policy, if not by the mere letter, of the law."

Again and again, courts have held that a citizen may employ "any legal means" available to him to diminish the tax which he must pay. It would seem then that Mr. Roosevelt's message used rather ill chosen and ill advised language when, in dealing with questions of tax avoidance, he sought to make it appear that it was wrong for a citizen to try to save his own money.

It has been rather interesting to note the type of outbursts, editorial and verbal, that has come as a result of Mr. Roosevelt's tax message. These outbursts have continued partly because the President asked congress to make an investigation of tax avoidance where some very large taxpayers are involved. Of course, congress is going to do that because it will give congress, or at least certain individual members, an opportunity for publicity. And they do not overlook opportunities for publicity.

Since the discussion of tax questions has continued on the basis of the projected investigation, it has given plenty of writers an opportunity to express their opinion in detail. Many of these critics have become quite personal in their assault upon Mr. Roosevelt and their biting observations are doing him no good politically at all. In fact, I have heard some rumblings beneath the surface to the effect that his tax message has hurt him as much politically as his proposal to add six new justices of his own choosing to the Supreme court of the United States.

Probably the worst of these criticisms appeared in the Washington Evening Star, a newspaper that seldom takes a bitter stand on any question. The Evening Star called attention to regulations of the bureau of internal revenue which prescribed that a person must count as income anything taken in payment of services, whether that thing be money or some other thing of value. It cited the fact that the President occupies the White House without payment of rent and that he has available a large staff of servants who man that institution; that he is provided with automobiles and yachts and various other services and circumstances without cost. Editorially, the newspaper then goes on:

"Has the President of the United States, unwittingly, failed to include in his income tax the value to him of the residence provided by the government which pays him his salary? Under these regulations it would appear that even the automobiles and the yachts provided by the government should be considered in making out an income tax return. There is no publication of income taxes and therefore the public is not informed as to whether the high officials of the government who are provided with residences, as some are, or with automobiles, as many of them are, take these things into consideration in reporting their income taxes. It would scarcely be an argument to say that residence provided for a public official is not part of his pay. Cabinet officers, for example, are not provided with residences by the government. They must provide residences themselves, at considerable cost. It is obvious, therefore, that a residence given a government official is part of his pay."

When the President proposed the tax investigation, he said that he believed there were a good many millions of dollars that could be forced into the federal treasury as a result of such inquiry. His action followed sweeping orders issued to internal revenue agents and auditors to review every income tax return with the utmost care. The agents and auditors, of course, will go over the returns filed by the entire list of income tax payers, little as well as big, but the congressional investigation will be devoted only to some of the men called by Mr. Roosevelt, "economic royalists."

It is obvious that congress cannot go into all returns so congress will pick on the big ones because those men will have names out of which good headlines in newspapers can be written.

The Treasury had a different idea about the investigation which congress undertook at the President's request. The Treasury's plan contemplated a number of secret hearings, star chamber sessions, and I believe everyone knows what can be had in a star chamber session with bureaucrats operating with all of the powers they possess in our government.

Word of the Treasury's ideas did not please congressional leaders and they very quickly put their foot down on the scheme. Of course, members of the house and senate figured they would not share in the political benefits unless they did the investigating. I hear much comment to the effect, however, that an investigation in the manner congress had decided to make it is much preferable to the star chamber proceedings which the Treasury proposed.

I mentioned that the congressional committee is dealing only with "big names." The reason for this is plain. It would do no good at all in a publicity way for the congressional groups to call in some small taxpayer who, by availing himself of the privileges of the law, had been able to reduce his total tax to a comparatively few dollars. On the other hand, if a big business man, an economic royalist, claims all of the exemptions and deductions that the law specifies and thereby cuts down his tax, he becomes the subject or the target for much ballyhoo about tax avoidance. I do not see the difference.

Since the President finds himself in a deadlock with congress on his proposal to add six justices of his own choosing to the Supreme court of the United States, he has turned to a new approach in dealing with the legislative situation. He has suddenly loaded congress down with work. This is to be distinguished from the course he has followed in his earlier years of his tenure when he submitted only one legislative suggestion at a time.

Now, in addition to the court reorganization proposal, there is before congress the far-reaching governmental reorganization plan, the billion dollar slum clearance and house building, farm tenancy bill and a highly controversial piece of legislation proposing to establish minimum wages and maximum hours for labor. These are, in addition, of course, to the tax revision proposition I have discussed above and the annual appropriation bills with the billion and a half relief fund measure.

'Way Back When

By JEANNE

DREISER WAS A BILL COLLECTOR

IF YOU lived in Chicago, Ill., years ago, you may have bought carpet tacks or a can of paint from a young hardware clerk who looked like nobody at all to you. A few years later you might have rented an apartment from the real estate office where he clerked; a little later you may have seen a young man persistently ringing the doorbell of that neighbor of yours who was careless about her furniture installments. For Theodore Dreiser, famous in American letters today, was in his youth hardware clerk, clerk in a real estate office, and bill collector for a furniture house.

He was born in Terre Haute, Ind., in 1871. A poor boy, he attended the public schools of Warsaw, Ind., quitting at the age of sixteen to go to work in Chicago at $5 per week. An ordinary young man, with an ordinary background, who could have foretold that some day he would produce a book ("American Tragedy") which would arouse world-wide controversy, banned in some cities, required reading in some school systems?

After the collector's job, persistent calling at the Chicago Daily Globe got him a job as a reporter. His rise was rapid as he developed a clear reportorial style, until 1898 he became editor-in-chief of the Butcherick Publications which included Delineator Magazine. His first book, "Sister Carrie," was published in 1900 and immediately banned for its frankness. It was not until 1911 that his next, "Jennie Gerhardt," appeared; and it was followed at regular intervals by other books of the "call a spade a spade" type. "American Tragedy" appeared in 1925, was translated into many languages and was adapted to the stage in America and in Germany as late as 1936.

LOWELL THOMAS WAS A COOK

THE life of Lowell Thomas has been tremendously exciting, but it may be encouraging to those of you in everyday jobs, and pining for adventure, to know that he was not always free from humdrum occupations.

The radio and news-reel reporter was born in Woodington, Ohio, in 1892. The family moved to Cripple Creek, Colo., where Lowell attended public schools set in the midst of a typical rough-and-ready mining town. His parents were not wealthy, and Lowell Thomas had to work for a higher education. While attending Valparaiso university in northern Indiana, he was a janitor, a salesman, and night cook in a short-order restaurant. Thirsting for more knowledge after graduation, the boy went on to the University of Denver where he took several degrees, working at odd times for a newspaper. During the summer months, he punched cows and pitched alfalfa. In Chicago Kent College of Law, he studied law, and then took post-graduate work in English literature at Princeton. After that he worked as a teacher and on a newspaper.

His beginning did not promise excitement and adventure. But then came the World war, and Lowell Thomas went to the front with a staff of cameramen making official pictures! It changed his whole life. He joined D. H. Lawrence and his bedouin army in Arabia, emerging from that "revolt on the desert" with the exclusive story and pictures. It was the beginning of his fame. Since then, he has met almost everyone of importance, seen everything of note, and reported his observations in newspapers, on the screen, and over the air in a graphic style that has gained him an audience to millions.

In as Much as Young Man Qualified for Job, He Got It

"Well," inquired the man in the swivel chair as the seventy-fourth applicant of the day strode into his office, "have you had a thorough education in art?"

"Yes, sir," answered the young applicant confidently, "I have."

"Studied in Europe?"

"Yes. Four years at the Beaux Arts."

"And you're sure you could guide visitors through this place competently?"

"Yes, I am sure."

"Well, we shall see. What were the three Greek orders?"

"Ionic, Corinthian and Doric."

"Good! What are the outstanding features of Gothic architecture?"

"Pointed arches, vertical accent, skeletal framework with small wall space and large windows. This contrasts with the Romanesque where—"

"Whoa. Whoa. That's enough. And you'd be able to explain reproductions of great painters to inquiring visitors?"

"Certainly. The perspective of Fabiano, the power and religious fervor of Masaccio, the splendid chiaroscuro of Leonardo, the relentless realism of Rembrandt, the brilliant color tones of Veronese, born 1528, died—"

THOUSANDS said that tires could not stand the terrific grind. They said cars had been built with much greater speed, turns in the track had been repaved with granite-like surface, yet Wilbur Shaw drove to victory on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires setting a new record of 113.58 miles per hour on one of the hottest days in the history of the Indianapolis track.

Think of the terrific impact on these tires as the cars roared into the treacherous turns and out again. Tons of force straining, pulling, and twisting inside the tire, yet not one cord loosened, not one tread separated from the cord body—all because Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process, successfully counteracted the internal friction and heat that ordinarily destroy tire life.

You will never drive your car at these record-breaking speeds, but for the safety of yourself and family you need the safest, strongest and most dependable tires. See your nearby Firestone Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store. Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires—the safest tires that money can buy.

DON'T RISK YOUR LIFE ON THIN WORN TIRES
No car owner is going to risk his life and the lives of his family knowingly on thin worn tires.

DO YOU KNOW
THAT last year highway accidents cost the lives of more than 38,000 men, women and children?
THAT a million more were injured?
THAT more than 40,000 of these deaths and injuries were caused directly by punctures, blowouts and skidding due to unsafe tires?

head of a stock company when he resided in Portage county. The company presented numerous Shakespearean plays.

"I am glad to see so many of the older persons who I counted as my friends still living in Stevens Point," the colorful veteran showman declared after making brief stops in a number of business places along Main street. "It certainly is pleasant to renew old acquaintances."

Mr. Hall moves about agilely, never stopping in one place more than a minute or two. Persons who saw him today said he appears and acts the same as he did 25 years ago when he was a candidate for the assembly, except that his hair has turned from black to gray.

Accompanying Mr. Hall were Mrs. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Don C. Hall Jr., and their daughter Miss Wanda Hall. A number of deceased relatives of the Halls are buried in Portage County.

Following the accident on Memorial Day in which Carroll Roberts was injured, Leonard Bruder, Jr., was blamed for the accident by some people, but he was not at the accident, but he heard the crash and was the first to arrive at the scene of the accident and after taking Carroll home, he rushed him in his own car to the Silver Cross hospital. Mr. Bruder is to be given a great deal of credit for his prompt first aid service.
